

Change Gonna Come: Integrating Music and Social Studies to Teach Civil Rights and Responsibilities (In-Ovations Book 1)

Popular music reflects American diversity, allowing for examination of historical events and concepts. This session provides upper elementary/middle school teachers with learning materials and approaches related to citizens' roles, rights, and responsibilities, beginning with music that provided support and inspiration during the American Civil Rights Movement. Session materials are based upon NCSS and NAFME standards, and elements of the Core Curriculum, including suggestions for active student participation in music listening, performing, creating, and evaluating, reading/writing across the curriculum, and adaptations for exceptional needs.
