This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1877 Excerpt: ... the 23d of October, H76, the Hon. William H. Hunt, republican candidate for attorney-general, J. E. Leonard, republican candidate for Congress, and Major Gorbam came to Bastrop to hold a massmeeting, according to previous appointment. There was a large crowd of colored and white voters present, every portion of the parish being represented. The speakers were treated with insults and menaces by the democrats, who finally became so riotous and threatening that Lieutenant Mabon, commanding a detachment of United States troops, was forced to interfere to keep the peace. Answer to cross-interrogatory 4. I did not see any colored man threatened or compelled by violence to join a democratic club; but I make the statement in my answer to interrogatory 5 from information giveu me by many colored men who themselves told me of their having joined democratic clubs under such duress. The fact has been stated to me so often by various colored republicans that I did not tax my memory with their names, not expecting to ever testify in regard to the same. Answer to cross-interrogatory 5. Auswered in my reply to direct interrogatory 6. Answer to cross-interrogatory 6. I have beard some conservative democrats in Morehouse argue and advocate a fair and peaceable election, but their influence was subordinate to the bull-dozer element of the democracy. According to my ideas of a fair election, it is not true that there was a fair election in Morehouse Parish on the 7th November, 1876; and as to its being a peaceable election, I can only say that at the poll where I voted I saw no breach of the peace. For the reasons stated in my answers to the above and foregoing interrogatory and cross-interrogatories, I do not believe that each and every elector at said poll voted for the can...
